

Meal Games:

- Initials
 - One person picks the initials VS
 - Others ask yes or no questions (Is it an object?)
 - Until they guess "Variety Snack"
- Movie Game
 - One person thinks of a movie or tv show and then gives 3 clues
 - Others ask yes or no questions
 - Until they guess the movie or tv show
- Target Game
 - One person picks/thinks of an item at target
 - Others ask yes or no questions
 - Until they guess the item
- Contact
 - One person thinks of a word and gives the group the first letter of the word, such as "S"
 - Others think of a word that starts with "S" such as "Squirrel" and ask a question about the word without stating the word. Ex: "Is it an animal?"
 - The person whose word starts with "S" has 3 guesses to name 3 animals that start with S. For example, "No, it's not a snake. No, it's not a snail. No it's not a salamander."
 - If the others (guessers) can think of another animal that starts with "S", such as squirrel, they say the word "contact."
 - On the count of 3, the guessers share their answers. For example: 2 people may say Squirrel, 1 person may say squid, and 1 person may say shellfish.
 - If two or more people say the same word, the person whose word starts with "S" has to give the guessers the next letter in the word, such as "Se"
 - This continues until all the letters are given or the guessers guess the word correctly.
- Green Glass Door
 - Someone comes up with a rule to be able to enter the green glass door, but does not tell anyone.
 - That person gives examples of words that can and cannot go through the green glass door.
 - Others ask if a word, such as balloons, can go through the green glass door. The person who made the rule, answers yes or no.
 - You continue doing this until everyone figures out what the rule is.
 - The traditional rule is that the word has to have double letters next to each other, such as green glass door, but you can make other rules as well.
 - Other rule ideas: Have to say "um" before saying the word, the word has to start with the first letter of the individual's name, the word has to be 5 letters long, etc.

- Favorites Game
 - Someone comes up with a question, such as “What’s your favorite Disney movie?”
 - Everyone goes around and answers
- Alphabet Game
 - Choose a topic, such as animals
 - Start with the letter A
 - The first person comes up with an animal that starts with A.
 - The second person states the animal that starts with A and then adds an animal that starts with B.
 - The third person states the previous A and B animals, plus an animal that starts with C, and so on.
- Essence
 - Choose one person to be the guesser
 - Have that person close their eyes and take their earbuds out
 - The rest of the group chooses one person to describe
 - The guesser comes back into the “room”
 - The guesser asks theoretical questions about the person the group chose, such as “If this person were a flower, what type of flower would they be?” or “If this person were an actor or actress, which actor or actress would they be?”
 - Each person in the group gives their answer.
 - You continue doing this until the guesser thinks they know who the person is and then guesses.
